

Working With Trans, Gender Variant and Non-Binary Young People

We are receiving an increasing number of requests from schools, and other organisations, to guide them appropriately to support any trans, gender variant or non-binary children or young people accessing their services. These requests tend to be reactive, in response to a young person “coming out”. We believe that a proactive approach is needed, having the systems, support and knowledge in place, acknowledging the inevitability that a trans, gender variant or non-binary child or young person is already attending your school, or accessing your provision.

A one day training course that will:

- Using experiences of young people, be an in depth exploration of, and focusing only, on gender and gender identity;
- Give delegates an appropriate set of terminology pertaining to trans, gender variant and non-binary identities;
- Explore myths and critique the misrepresentation of trans, gender variant and non-binary people in popular culture and the media;
- Look at the legal, Ofsted and moral obligations of an organisation to meet the needs of a trans, gender variant or non-binary child in their care, or accessing their services;
- Offer appropriate signposting to organisations that can offer support to a trans young person and their family;
- Give delegates the confidence and skills to recognise and appropriately challenge transphobic language and behaviours.
